“LuxLive is the largest lighting fair in Europe. It is attended by representatives of key architectural offices and lighting designers from all over the world. Participation in this type of event gives us the opportunity to present ES-SYSTEM products to architects and investors, which I hope will translate to company's further dynamic development on foreign markets,” says Rafał Gawrylak, president of ES-SYSTEM.

FOCUS ON THE HUMAN CIRCADIAN RHYTHM

During this event, ES-SYSTEM presented luminaires with the latest technology called CIRCADIAN, which has an impact on the circadian rhythm of human life thanks to the use of “Human Centric Lighting” (HCL). This technology introduces an innovative approach to lighting design, putting the focus on humans and their correct psychophysical functioning. Light that is designed in accordance with HCL increases productivity of office work, learning at school, patients' recovery at hospitals and care centers, and helps to relax, unwind, and get ready for sleep.

“More and more people are becoming interested in lighting in the context of its impact on human health and life. We are already seeing an increased interest in HCL-based lighting solutions. Electric lighting market research agencies forecast that the HCL market in Poland will reach a value of about 44 million euro by 2020. The strongest interest was recorded in the office, medical, educational and residential building segment,” explains the president of ES-SYSTEM.

LuxLive is the largest lighting fair in Europe. This year's edition took place on November 15-16 in London. The event brings together thousands of investors, architects and visitors from all over the world every year.
